The ideal candidates for Arrowmont's Artist-In-Residence Program are pre-professional, self-directed visual artists who are able to work independently as well as in a group. The desired candidate should be eager to participate in Arrowmont's diverse, existing programs including conferences, community adult and children's classes, and other outreach programs with varied age groups. Candidates who enjoy the "team spirit" of working with staff, interacting with visiting faculty and other residents are encouraged to apply. Professional growth, exploration and experimentation are three of the benefits associated with completing a residency at Arrowmont. This program is designed primarily for artists who are transitioning or beginning their career as an artist or teacher. Presently, this program is open to US citizens.
