Textiles

Sonya Phillip

June 9-14, 2024

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Before mechanized production, cloth was a precious commodity. In this workshop students will learn basic garment sewing, in addition to strategies for cutting fabric and incorporating piecework into whole cloth patterns. Students will discover a variety of modifications and fabric manipulation techniques in order to alter length and to create different necklines and pocket styles. This class is ideally suited for handweavers and textile lovers, however simple patterns offer easy entry to those sewing clothes for the first time. This class is open to all skill levels, however previous experience using a sewing machine is required.

MATERIALS LIST

- selection of fabric totaling 15-20 yards
- selection of large remnants, fat quarters
- White and black thread, additional colors that match fabric selection
